

First Step on Municipal Plant Question Should Be Setting Up of a Commission

The retiring administration of the City of Hope has offered, subject to the agreement of incoming officials and citizens generally, an expansion program for the municipal electric plant.

As outlined at the regular council meeting November 20, it is proposed to purchase one new 2,500 KW generator and accessory wiring and piping at a maximum cost of $787,600, and to obtain an additional supply of standby power on bids from neighboring high-lines.

This program, including the actual bids expected from the power companies, is to be discussed further at a public meeting of the council Tuesday, December 11. This will be a special session, with the fullest public attendance urged.

In the meantime we would like to call further attention to a point we emphasized in an editorial November 17. It was the last, and perhaps the most important, of a five-point program we suggested for the municipal plant. Here it is:

"5. The Star is for municipal-plant operation, now and always. But whatever we do about the industrial power question it is obvious our city has grown to the point where, like Jonesboro and Conway, the actual control of the plant should be delegated by the city to a city-appointed commission. The details of an electric plant are enormous and require long-term management."

I believe most of the people who attended the three long and exhausting council sessions on the municipal plant question this month will agree that the time has come when the operation should be delegated to commission control — and that it should be done before the expansion program is undertaken.

There is no management-continuity in a two-year elective city government. Within six years you are likely to find an entirely new official body. And yet a million-dollar power plant — the largest industry in our area — is supposed to run efficiently with such periodic and sweeping changes in top management.

It is a great tribute to Hope's "know how" to be able to report that even in these circumstances our municipal plant has grown steadily, has been consistently profitable, and is today in the best position this writer has observed in 22 years.

But the city has grown, and the plant also; and we are gambling unwarrantably with Old Lady Luck to postpone any longer what we should have done years ago — placing the plant under a city-appointed commission of local business men. The largest and finest municipal plant in Arkansas, the one at Jonesboro, is so operated. I have written Jonesboro for details of their setup — but this question should be pursued officially and legally.

You hear criticism at times — that a municipal plant constitutes a hindrance to the industrial development of a community. I doubt that. Arkansas Power & Light Co. which serves El Dorado never was able to promote new industry in that town other than what the oil business developed of its own accord. On the other hand, new industry did come to Camden, another point served by A. P. & L. — but the start of that industrial development was a paper mill, moving upstream from Bastrop-Monroe, La., following the Ouachita river because of all-important water.

It is vital, however, that every city do assure itself of an adequate supply of power, at rates competitive with the private power lines. Hope does need more electricity — and it does need rate revision on certain classifications.

The residential rates of Hope compare favorably with private-power rates. Up to bills of $10 a month I believe our rates are lower. But our commercial rates are out of line — and for practical purposes we have no industrial rate structure at all.

One quick answer to industrial criticism would be this:

The municipal plant should be instructed to quote local industry the same rates quoted by private power systems for equivalent demand. Maybe we wouldn't make any money on these particular deals — but the obligation to meet competition when serving local plants which sell in competition with goods manufactured in other cities and states is clear and explicit . . . if we expect to see our community thrive and expand.

This is a grave and complex question. The details should be gone into by a commission of business men, appointed to long and staggered terms. They would screen these matters with the aid of expert help, and then report back to the city government on results and for instruction as to general policy in the future.

This, as brief as I can make it, is the case for a municipal plant commission — and it should be appointed before we finally commit ourselves to the program at hand.

Terms Truman Weakest Demo Candidate

Washington, Nov. 26 (AP) — Senator Byrd (D-Va.) said he regards President Truman as "weaker today than any" other possible Democratic nominee for the presidency in 1952 and he does not think the President can be re-elected.

Byrd, perhaps Mr. Truman's bitterest critic within his own party, said however it is his personal belief "that he is going to run if he thinks he can win," and he added: "I've been doing all I can to help him make up his mind. I do not think he can be elected if nominated."

Mr. Truman has said he has decided whether he will run again but is not ready to announce his decision.

Meanwhile, Senator Aiken (R-Vt.) proposed that the Republicans nominate for the vice presidency the senate's only current woman member, Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine. Mrs. Smith said she is not a candidate.

Byrd, in an interview with the magazine U. S. News and World Report, said:

"Today I am convinced that Mr. Truman would bring this country to disaster if his program is adopted."

"I feel further that his re-election in 1952 could rightfully be claimed by him to be a mandate from the people to put through this program in its entirety."

Byrd said he thought that "opposition to Mr. Truman and his policies is very much greater in the south than it's ever been before."

Asked about feeling in the South toward Chief Justice Vinson, mentioned by some as a possible candidate behind whom it might be possible to unify the party, Byrd said any such move would depend in part upon the platform. He added:

"Nobody knows that Mr. Vinson would accept if nominated."

Aiken's boost for Mrs. Smith as a possible vice presidential nominee was made in an interview.

"I know she would greatly strengthen our 1952 ticket with anyone," Aiken told a reporter. "And if anything should happen to the President, the country would still be in strong, capable hands."

Told of her colleague's suggestion, Mrs. Smith said in a separate interview:

"I appreciate the confidence and faith Senator Aiken expressed. I am not a candidate. I am realistic enough to know that there is not even the most remote possibility of such a thing happening."

Aiken's plug for Mrs. Smith came in the wake of an announcement by supporters of Harold E. Stassen that they are opening a headquarters here for a drive to win the GOP presidential nomination for him.

Daniel C. Gaaney of Owatonna, Minn., said he and others expect to persuade Stassen, former Minnesota governor who is now president of the University of Pennsylvania, to run for the nomination to win in 1948.

Howard M. Shanley of Newark, N. J., national chairman of the Stassen boosters, said party spokesmen in 17 states want Stassen to run again. Stassen has said he will decide in January whether to run.

Lions Seeking Old Toys for Yule Packages

The Hope Lions Club appealed today for old toys that can be rebuilt to add to Christmas gift packages to needy families in this section.

Persons having old toys are asked to leave them at Luck's Station, the White Elephant or the Fire Station. They will be taken and reconditioned and placed in bundles for needy groups.

High Court Rules on Gambling

Little Rock, Nov. 26 (AP) — The Arkansas Supreme court has asked for a transcript of the Arkansas Bar association rules committee's investigation of the Tim Holt divorce case.

The possibility of judicial review of the committee's findings was opened when Chief Justice Griffin Smith Saturday requested the transcript.

Howard Cockrill of Little Rock, secretary of the committee — the investigative and prosecuting body in cases involving unethical legal practices — said the transcript would be turned over to the court "as a matter of course."

The committee apparently had exonerated the two attorneys involved in the attempt of Western film actor Tim Holt to obtain an Arkansas divorce from Alice Harrison Holt.

Pulaski chancery court considered the case, but the petition for divorce later was withdrawn by Holt's attorney, state Sen. Max Howell of Little Rock. Howell asked that the petition be withdrawn after learning that Holt could not meet the state's 90-day residency requirement.

Mrs. Holt was represented by State Sen. Clyde Byrd of El Dorado. Both Howell and Byrd said the rules committee had exonerated them in the case. Much resulted in a fine for Holt on a charge of second degree perjury.

Frank Swilling of Little Rock, an employee of the Arkansas Live stock show, of which Byrd is manager, also has been charged with perjury in the case. He testified in support of Holt's original claim that the actor was a resident of Arkansas.

Prosecutor Tom Downie of Pulaski county has said he will press first degree perjury charges against Swilling.

Runaway Bolts Into Car, Youth Dies at Nashville

By The Associated Press
Twenty-four persons died violently in Arkansas this week, but the weekend fatality toll dropped off to a comparatively small total of four. John Hilliard, 19-year-old North Little Rock high school football player, was killed early Sunday when his automobile and a truck collided in North Little Rock.

Hilliard, a standout defensive performer for the last two years, performed for North Little Rock at the offensive fullback position. He played his final high school game Thursday when his team downed Little Rock, 14 to 13.

He was alone in the car. In Nashville, Ark., Lloyd Ray Funderburk was killed when his horse bolted from a roadside lane and crashed into the side of a moving automobile. Funderburk died later Sunday in a Nashville hospital.

Sheriff Ambrose Chessier said the accident was "unavoidable." An Oklahoma pipeline worker was shot to death in an argument at an Ozark tourist spot Saturday. He was Dee Ashford, about 45, of Bristow, Okla.

Arkansas State Trooper Gordon Cockrill said George E. Veatch of Odessa, Tex., was being held for questioning. However, Prosecutor Jack Yates said Sunday that no charges have been filed against Veatch.

A 23-year-old Hunter was killed by his own gun while returning from a duck hunt near Cotton point. Kenneth McGuire of Des Moines stepped from his car to fix a flat and fired a shotgun lying in the seat. The gun fired, wounding McGuire in the side.

McGuire was the ninth hunting fatality in Arkansas this fall.

MORE CASUALTIES

Washington, Nov. 26 (AP) — The defense department today added 178 names to its list of identified battle casualties in Korea. A new list (Nov. 4-8) listed 33 killed, 117 wounded, 17 missing in action and 11 injured in accidents.

Truman Studies Atrocities by the Chinese

Key West, Fla., Nov. 26 (AP) — Confidants said today President Truman is making a thorough inquiry into the handling of the Korean atrocity charges.

An atmosphere of official silence, however, enveloped his investigation. And the same official silence covered his study of:

1. The alleged shooting down of an American bomber by Russian fighter planes.

2. Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei V. Vishinsky's rejection of the American-French-British disarmament proposal.

3. A house committee's demand for justice department files on tax fraud prosecutions for its inquiry into internal revenue bureau scandals.

Presidential Secretary Joseph Short refused to comment on any of these developments, but other White House aides, unquoteable by name, said the President is reserving a statement on the atrocity charges until he has all the facts at his command.

In his only public comment on the atrocity charges, the President termed the charges horrible and said if true it was the most uncivilized thing that has happened in the past century.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R-Mass.), charging "errors and contradictions" and "botched handling" of the charges that North Korean and Chinese Reds murdered Allied prisoners of war, declared:

"The President owes the parents of our servicemen a clear and unmistakable statement of the facts at the earliest moment."

This development followed the disclosure that General Matthew B. Ridgway had reported to the United Nations as early as Nov. 12 that his office was investigating reports that 8,000 American prisoners of war had been slain.

Mrs. Rogers noted that the latest casualty reports from the defense department indicated 16,972 Americans killed in action or dead of wounds and 10,871 missing. She said the parents of fighting men are entitled to know whether Ridgway's figures are included in the defense department report.

Mr. Truman gets top-secret reports from the state department and the joint chiefs of staff daily. They are brought to him by trusted messengers who ride navy courier planes.

Presumably these reports also cover known details behind United States charges that a missing navy Neptune bomber was attacked without warning by Soviet fighter planes over the sea of Japan Nov. 6. The plane, with ten men aboard, was believed to have been shot down.

Vishinsky's rejection of the three-power proposal for disarmament did not catch the President by surprise. However, he contended at his last news conference here that public opinion among the Russian people might eventually force the Russian government to go along with it.

In a Year the Story of the War in Korea Remains Almost Unchanged Except for Losses

By HAL BOYLE
New York (AP) — A year ago today the Allied win-the-war offensive in Korea crashed and broke against a hidden Chinese wall.

In three days the U. N. army's hopeful victory march toward the Manchurian border turned into "the great retreat." The Allies, surprised by the sudden appearance of untold thousands of Chinese Reds, who seemed to crawl from the very stones, reeled back to escape entrapment. Some units were ambushed and engulfed.

In less than three weeks the Allies suffered about 13,000 casualties, not including the thousands lost by South Korean (ROK) forces. Most of the 13,000 were Americans, although the Turkish Brigade suffered heavily, too.

During the long pullback the U. N. had to yield Pyongyang, the Red capital of Korea, and then Seoul, the Republican capital. It had to evacuate by sea two American divisions — the seventh Infantry and the First Marines — and scores of thousands of Korean civilians.

Later, in stubborn hill fighting, including deadly "Ho a break Ridge," the Allies regained Seoul and most of the territory south of the 38th parallel, the old dividing line.

But today thousands of square miles once held by the Allies are still firmly in Chinese Red control as the two sides quarrel like angry landlords for a cease-fire line on which to build an armistice.

And the fighting is still going on. What happened a year ago to change the Korean picture so quickly?

The main factor was the amaz-

Three Youths Are Injured When Auto Overturns

Early Sunday morning a Ford Coupe driven by Donald W. Quillen, 18, of near Hope, went out of control, slipped and rolled 127 steps before coming to a halt bottom side up, about 14 miles south on Highway 29.

Quillen suffered severe bruises and facial lacerations. Two of the four boys riding with him also were injured. Billy Burns, 18, of near Hope, sustained a chest injury. Bruises, lacerations, Robert Graham, 18, of the same area, also was bruised.

The auto was completely demolished, said investigating State Officer Guy Dowling.

Slavs Charge Russia Massing on Border

Paris, Nov. 26 (UP) — Yugoslavia charged today that Russia and its satellite countries had massed troops and built fortifications along the Yugoslav borders for a possible invasion.

Yugoslav Delegate Milovan Djilas told the United Nations political committee that the action "fundamentally threatens world peace."

Djilas said that Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria had 810,000 men under arms — more than three times the number allowed them under current peace treaties — and that they had deployed 23 of their 50 divisions along the Yugoslav border. He said Russia also had large army units in Rumania and Hungary.

Djilas added that all the Balkan satellite countries had intensified their military programs and had plans and tanks far in excess of peace treaty limits.

He said these troops maneuvered constantly along the Yugoslav frontier and were rebuilding and adding to fortifications formerly used in World War II.

The Yugoslav delegate said the communist — the organization of Soviet satellite countries with which Marshal Tito broke in 1948 — also had imposed an economic blockade against Yugoslavia and had infiltrated hundreds of spies and saboteurs into the country. He said Yugoslavia had arrested 504 Communist spies and saboteurs in the last three years.

Djilas requested that the U. N. recommend that the nations involved settle their disputes in accordance with the spirit of the U. N. charter and on an out-front quarrel through mixed commissions or other peaceful ways.

ENTERTAINS TROOPS

Tokyo, Nov. 26 (AP) — Larry Adler, the harmonica virtuoso, entertained Allied wounded in a Tokyo hospital today.

Adler, an American, was flown to Japan by the British.

Harmonica here he entertained 1,000 persons at American-held Okinawa.

British troops said Adler suggested the Far East junkie when he was in London. He will entertain British troops under the command of Maj. Gen. Jim Cassels, who invited him out here.

Cease Fire Line Settled, Peace a Step Nearer

Munsan, Korea, Nov. 26 (AP) — Allied and Communist staff officers tonight agreed on the exact location of a 145-mile line across Korea where the shooting will stop if an armistice is signed within 30 days.

Only signatures of the truce negotiators are needed to complete settlement of the second item on the armistice Agenda — fixing a cease-fire line.

The subcommittee will meet in Pannumjion tomorrow at 10 a.m. (7 p.m. CST Monday) to approve the proposal. The full five-man armistice delegations will open a plenary session one hour later, formal adoption of the buffer zone clause is expected to be a mere formality.

Then in a race against the 30-day deadline and while the fighting goes on, the negotiators will work on three other points that must be agreed on before a full armistice can be signed.

The staff officers plodded the last sector of the cease-fire line after a marathon session lasting almost 7 1/2 hours.

The official U. N. command communique said minor differences cropped up after the officers reached general agreement on the line of battle contact. All were ironed out and the line was drawn on two sets of maps which both sides initialed.

The cease-fire line approved by the negotiators will be the center of a demilitarized buffer zone 2 1/2 miles wide if an armistice is signed within 30 days of the approval expected Tuesday.

The fighting will continue until an armistice is reached, and if the negotiators fail to reach agreement within the time-limit, the line will be redrawn just before the truce goes into effect to cover battle changes.

After the buffer zone clause is formally approved, the truce delegations first will try to agree on measures for enforcing the armistice, including inspections behind the front lines.

Two other tough problems also must be solved before an armistice can become effective. They are the exchange of war prisoners and recommendations to the belligerent governments, including withdrawal of foreign troops from Korea.

For a time Monday it looked as though the staff officers might tour the battle line by helicopter to check on which side held the areas still in dispute. A "copter stand by" an hour before plans for the tour were called off.

Even as the staff officers agreed on the line of battle contact, some changes were being made.

Despite deep snow and bitter cold Chinese attacked allied lines on the central and eastern fronts Monday and won three advance positions east of the Pukhan river in central Korea.

Allied troops recaptured an advance position southwest of Kumsong in the same general area and beat off Red attacks in the East.

In the West, Allied troops attacked south of Pannumjion were hit by a Chinese counterattack which drove them back. Other U. N. forces were strongly dug-in atop the key West Korean hill mass known as the Little Gibraltar, against which the Reds buried up to 24,000 troops in a bloody 41-hour battle which ended Sunday.

Red prisoners said they had been told the war would end soon if they took the peaks.

Allied officers described United Nations losses in the fight as low despite some of the most intense mortar and artillery fire in weeks.

There was a growing belief in the Western front that Russian satellite officers have taken command of Chinese artillery. Red artillery has increased markedly in effectiveness since November 1, and one Allied radio man said he heard "pure Russian" artillery commanders.

The first big winter storm struck the fighting Monday in a blizzard. The temperature sank to 10 below zero in the east where snowdrifts of snow covered the jagged mountains. In the west, it was 12 below with four inches of snow.

Winds in gusts up to 60 mph an hour lashed the west.

One Person Hurt in Accident Near Gardon

A car driven by W. O. Clark, Negro, of San Bernardino, Calif., crashed into the back of a truck loaded with Mexican laborers at 2 a.m. today 5 miles south of Gardon on Highway 87, resulting in serious injury to one person.

Nobody in the truck was injured but Clark's wife was seriously hurt and admitted to Cora Donnell Hospital for treatment.

The auto was badly damaged. Investigators included Hilton, Guy Downing and Campbell of the State Police and Horace Hale, Nevada Deputy Sheriff.

State officers also reported two large transports slipped off road shoulders west on Highway 87, over the weekend and required wreckers to pull them back onto the road.

Paisley Parents to Discuss Cub Troop

A Cub Scouting program will be discussed tonight when parents of Paisley School students meet at the school at 7:30. Scout officials will discuss the possibility of the school sponsoring a Cub troop.

Chinese Press Attacks in Cold and Snow

Seoul, Korea, Nov. 26 (AP) — Communist troops today attacked savagely through deep snow and bitter cold at both ends and in the center of the Korean battle line.

In the west, advancing U. N. troops were hit by a reinforced Communist battalion south of Pannumjion, the site of cease-fire negotiations. Some 20 miles away, near Yonchon, Allied forces Sunday had shattered an attack by up to 24,000 Chinese against "Little Gibraltar."

Fifth Army headquarters said Allied troops were pushing toward high ground south of Pannumjion when the Reds counterattacked, shoving the U. N. forces back toward their main lines.

East of the Pukhan river on the central front, where the U. N. command launched a victorious two-day line-straightening offensive Nov. 17-18, a Red battalion drove Allied defenders out of three advanced positions.

Southwest of Kumsong, in the same general area, U. N. forces mounted an attack of their own and recaptured an advance position recently lost to the Reds.

The Communist attacks against a hill position northwest of Yonchon were beaten off, the Eighth Army said.

The U. N. command was expressed belief the Reds were trying to grab strategic positions while truce negotiators at Pannumjion are attempting to map the battle line. Victory in such a campaign would have far-reaching effects since the line being drawn will become the permanent cease-fire line if an armistice is signed within 30 days after the line is adopted.

In the air, Allied and Communist jets tangled Monday in a new air battle over North Korea.

The fifth air force said 17 F-80 Sabres tangled with nearly 60 MIG-15s and damaged two in an action swinging from 35,000 feet down to 20,000. It reported that all the Sabres returned safely.

Snow up to six inches, temperatures as low as 10 above zero and icy winds up to 60 mph an hour heralded the first big winter storm. That enforced a ground halt.

But the Little Gibraltar fight from Friday on Sunday was fierce.

An Allied officer said the combat effectiveness of an entire Korean division Chinese Red Army corps (about 20,000 troops) was destroyed in Allied defense of Little Gibraltar four dominating peaks west of Yonchon. He estimated that 500 Reds were killed and more than 3,000 wounded.

Red prisoners said they had been told the war would end soon if they took the peaks.

Allied officers described United Nations losses in the fight as low despite some of the most intense mortar and artillery fire in weeks.

There was a growing belief in the Western front that Russian satellite officers have taken command of Chinese artillery. Red artillery has increased markedly in effectiveness since November 1, and one Allied radio man said he heard "pure Russian" artillery commanders.

U. S. Ready to Discuss Iran With Russia

Paris, Nov. 26 (AP)—The United States agreed today to get together with Russia for private disarmament talks as suggested by a group of Asian-Arab states, but expressed doubt as to the usefulness of the move.

Jean, Pakistan and Syria submitted a resolution to the 60-member United Nations political committee asking that the big four—Russia, the United States, Britain and France—meet privately to discuss the possibility of a general disarmament plan.

President Lais Pailla Nervo of Mexico to try to reconcile the Western and Russian disarmament plans.

Ambassador Philip C. Jessup later told the committee the U. S. was ready to do this if the committee voted it. He pointed out, however, that the deputy foreign ministers of the four countries had tried for 14 weeks last spring to reach such an agreement without success.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky told reporters he had not yet decided on an answer to the Asian-Arab move aimed at easing East-West tension.

India's Sir Benegal Rau led off the Asian-Arab peace drive with suggestions for a "study group" to try for a permanent end to the Korean war and for an assembly sub-committee to try to reconcile the Western and Russian disarmament proposals.

Pakistan's Sir Mohammed Zafarullah Khan then introduced a formal resolution in the 60-member political committee to establish a conciliation group to negotiate in private on disarmament.

The members of Pakistan's proposed group would be assembly President Lais Padilla Nervo of Mexico, and delegates of the Big Four—the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France.

This group's private sessions would substitute for the public debate which has been raging in the United Nations for the past three weeks.

CHAPTER THIRTY

TO EACH complaint about her party, Mollie mentioned her indebtedness to Clara. She did not mention the next morning, when she met her on the walk between Sherman and Clinton.

"Liz Ragdale helped, too," he pointed out. "That was a very interesting show. I'm glad I saw that family in operation. I didn't know you'd asked them."

"I'm sorry I didn't tell you." He glanced at her in protest. "I am touchy," she admitted quickly. "Sometimes I wonder what's wrong with me."

"Want a diagnosis?" His eyes were bright. "I asked the Ragdales because I wasn't sure they'd come."

"One of 'em was dragged," he agreed. "My party wasn't that important."

"Oh, I don't suppose those two agree on anything. I've sensed their conflict just seeing them usually. That's why I particularly enjoyed yesterday's performance—because it was an act, on Liz's part. Very well done, too."

"All I cared about was the way she rescued me—she, and Clara."

"Yep, Clara, too. It was, all in all, quite a party, but please, Mollie, don't let me walk in again, unprepared, on dollies and angel food. I'm too old for shocks like that."

"Are you coming in here?" she asked, indicating the door to Childrean.

"I'll walk through—I'm going over to Boone. And I meant to look you up to ask if you'd assist me on the lecture I'm giving this afternoon."

"Are you demonstrating?" "I am."

"Then of course I'll assist. What time is it?" "Supper'll tell you. Thanks, Mollie."

She looked at him in surprise. "Why, Nicholas, you know—"

"I don't know anything," he said crossly. "Things are all mixed up for me, too, Mollie. It hit me pretty hard yesterday to come into your place and find Clara in charge."

"Sure I knew. Sylvester and I spent hours yesterday on another mark-get-set-ready-to-go to come help you. But you didn't ask. It was well-deserved. To both of us. We had hoped you were somewhat indispensable. He eyed her questioningly. She bit her lip and said nothing.

Nicholas opened the heavy inner door for two nurses who came through the vestibule; he and Mollie acknowledged their greetings. "Women are many things, Mollie," he said when they were alone again, "but I've never considered them especially gifted as friends. I think the qualities which make them women guaranteed the impossibility of the other status. And rightly so. Take friendship—to be fortunate to have her faith and to be surrounded by a loving family to lighten her trouble."

He Didn't Care Enough "I think you have no cause for self-reproach in having her postpone the marriage originally. If Billy really cared for her, then he would have waited the year or two necessary to get the unqualified approval of her family. His haste to marry someone else certainly does not indicate any part of the love and devotion Rita deserves."

There is really nothing you or any member of your family can do, over and above what you are already doing, to bring your sister more quickly out of her depression. Since she has lots of friends, and an active social life, she'll snap out of it to a degree.

To hope that she will ever completely throw off the pain of Billy's desertion is expecting too much. But she will forget to the point where she will fall in love again, though probably not so deeply, and eventually will find another, more dependable man with whom she can establish a happy marriage.

Dear Miss Dix: Will you please say a few words that will influence a girl of 16 to be more tidy and clean about her person. The rest of her family are very neat yet she sits around with nothing to do and won't even clean up her clothes. If someone else doesn't wash them for her, she'll wear them until they're ready to fall off. She is pretty, and thinks that's all she needs to get by in the world.

Answer: The most beautiful girl in the world could never make or keep a friend if she neglected the outward signs of cleanliness. Your friend is using to find herself very much in the social background if she doesn't reform. She'll see down right homey girls who are well groomed and sparkling clean walk off with all the dates while she stays home and looks at her pretty face in the mirror. That's all the company she'd get.

Sixteen is the age when most girls drive their families frantic with almost too much personal fussiness. Someone better wake your little friend up to the realities of life. Doesn't she read the ads? These ads should make her realize how fast she is turning herself into a social liability.

Dear Miss Dix: I am 14 and have a friend, there must be dependence. And, his voice snapped, "if you're ready to claim that you can depend on Clara—My soul, Mollie!"

"That may apply to Clara, Nicholas. But I was your friend once, and—"

"Oh, no, you weren't," he broke in. "Not from my point of view."

"Oh, Nicholas..." she cried, still baffled by this change in him when she had thought the know-no-well. He sensed her confusion and laughed at her.

"Don't fret about it, Mollie," he urged. "I feel about you," she assured him. "I used to think you liked me."

"I did. And here it was again, the distancing intention."

"This now..." She looked up at him, frowning and laughing, too. "Nothing I do pleases you."

"That's true," he agreed readily. "And you don't like criticism. But certainly you can understand a certain amount of present captiousness on my part."

"Look, Nicholas. Let's get this straight—"

"Oh, let's not!" "But when you criticize me, you should let me explain—"

"I shouldn't criticize you," he agreed. "Unless I do let you explain, but we'll fix that this way, Mollie: you go along and do the way you want, be what you want—and if that includes friendship with Clara, I'll be Johnny-on-the-spot with my criticism!" He made an awful face. "But do watch her, darling," he said earnestly.

"Good morning, Burke," said Dr. Cowan.

"Morning, Burke," murmured Mollie, flushing that she had mistaken Nicholas and had not said Doctor. But she was upset. Nicholas upset her always these days.

"I think, Nicholas," she snapped, when Burke had taken his ears out of range, "that you'd be happier, and I know I would be, if you'd stop being so cynical on every subject. That attitude gets a little wearying when it extends to anything so simple as a neighborly gesture."

She jerked at the inner door's handle, and Nicholas took the weight from her. "Will you go to the bath with me on Saturday night?" he asked quietly.

She turned her head sharply to look at him, her hair spraying against her cheek. "No," she said abruptly. "I can't."

"Don't pout, Mollie," he waited for her to precede him into the elevator.

"I'm not pouting!" "Ho, ho!" he challenged. "What was it then? Answer me that after you tell me why, whatever button I punch on this thing, I always end up in the basement?"

Mollie laughed, and pushed his hand away from the indicator panel. "Let me do that," she urged. "I'm late as it is. What floor do you want, Dr. Cowan?"

"Oh, I wanted the basement."

Time Helps

Dear Miss Dix: My problem concerns my younger sister, 21. Three years ago she wanted to marry Billy. But the family thought she was too young and since she would not marry without their consent, the wedding was postponed. A few months later Billy married and Rita was almost physically ill with grief. As time went on she recovered somewhat but has never gained her gay, fun-loving and friendly manner, which was formerly one of her outstanding characteristics. She is very popular, and while she does go out occasionally on dates, they seem to mean nothing to her. She seems to be cold toward everything and everyone. She claims she has no love for Billy now; in fact, the only real interest she has is in church.

Will she ever be her old self again, and is there anything I can do to bring her out of the shell into which she has retired?

Answer: Rita has, with amazing gallantry and courage in one so young, solved much of her problem alone and time will complete the cure as far as one can ever be made. In finding her chief consolation in church, she is going to the best source possible. She is fortunate to have her faith and to be surrounded by a loving family to lighten her trouble.

He Didn't Care Enough "I think you have no cause for self-reproach in having her postpone the marriage originally. Mollie laughed aloud, something almost her usual self. "Then I'll go to third, and leave you to your fate. About Saturday, Nicholas. I'm sorry, but I'm going to be busy that evening."

"But, Mollie, I bought two tickets!"

The elevator grille slid back. "I've warned you before about wasting your money, Nicholas," she said severely. "Bye, now. See you this afternoon."

He said something which the door opened, smiling at his probable retort and at the pleasure which was hers whenever she thought about the date she had for Saturday night.

That date was with Peter. He had explained at some length why his mother was coming to see him two weeks after Christmas rather than on the day itself. But Christmas was far away to the owner of a busy dress shop, then there was the matter of inventory and after-Christmas sales. But this week-end was to be their Christmas together, and Peter especially wanted Mollie and his mother to meet.

Mollie had immediately suggested that Peter bring Mrs. Shepherd to dinner at her apartment—and Peter as immediately had demurred. He'd made various excuses, all of them evasions of his real reason which was only revealed to Mollie when, at last, she met Mrs. Shepherd.

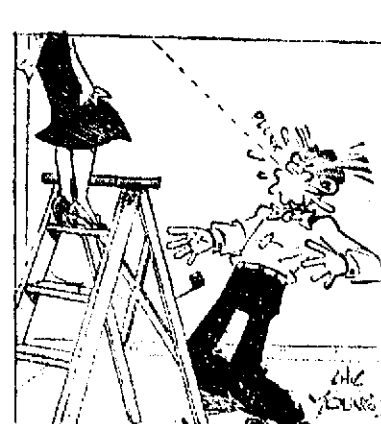

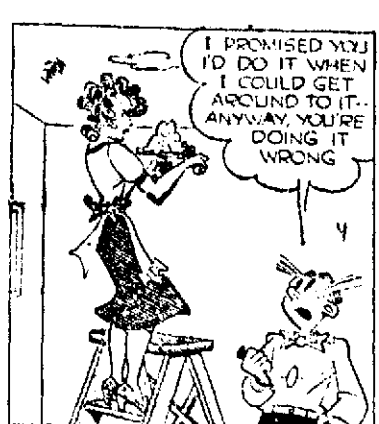

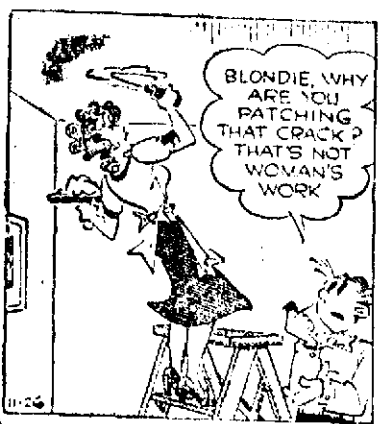

Her apartment, it seemed, was too "different"; in it, Mollie was too definitely a career woman. But that revelation was to come later.

When Peter made a special point of inviting her to meet his mother, she had been as excited as any girl of eighteen. They'd have dinner, he said, at the hotel, just the three of them; he'd come by for Mollie. She objected, his time would be short, she'd meet them in the lounge. Should she dress?

"Not too much," said Peter. He wasn't wearing a Tux, he explained.

But Mollie did "dress" to the extent of being exceedingly careful in the selection of her costume.

She wanted to be as elegant for Peter, but his odd manner about her apartment warned her to avoid the sensational, to be smart, but not too smart, and to expend her energy on grooming rather than on more obvious appeals for attention. Coming into the hotel, with Peter approaching, lifting her fur coat from her shoulders, his anxious eyes made her wonder if he had wanted to fetch her so that he might check on her appearance, be sure—

Dist. 7 Tops Class AA All-State

Little Rock, Nov. 26 (AP) — Seven is a magic number for the 1951 all-Arkansas Class AA high school football team.

District seven, which has seven teams, placed seven players on the official first team, picked by the A.A. coaches and announced by the Arkansas Athletic Association.

No other district in the state has more than four teams in Class AA. Texas has the most, with seven.

SWC 'Dream' Team Places Bob Griffin

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 26 (AP) — Every team in the league with the exception of Texas Christian, which might win the championship, played men on the 1951 United Press All-Southwest conference team announced today.

Bayler, which has been among the nation's top 10 eleven in the United Press coaches ratings most of the season, took three of the positions, including the only two unanimous choices, while Texas, Rice and Texas A & M, which has yet to score a conference victory, placed two each.

The other two spots on the team went to Southern Methodist and Arkansas.

Representing Bayler on the mythical eleven were T. Quarterback Larry Isbell and Guard Bill Athey, the unanimous choices, and End Stan Williams, Isbell's favorite receiver.

Texas speedster Guard Harley Sewell and Halfback Gub Dawson, who lacked only two votes of being unanimous, the Texas Aggies placed Tackle Jack Little and Halfback Glenn Lippman. Rice got End Bill Howton, who lacked only one vote of being a solid choice, and Halfback Teddy Riggs.

SMU's Dick Hightower won the tackle slot in a walkway while Arkansas' Bob Griffin won the other tackle slot although he received votes for tackle, guard and center.

Isbell and Hightower were the only repeaters from the 1950 team while four others who had a chance to repeat had varying degrees of success. End Harold Riley of Bayler made the second team this year, Guard Dave Hammer of Arkansas and Fullback Bob Smith of A & M placed on the third team, and Texas Halfback Byron Townsend failed to get a single vote.

Howton, Williams, Hightower and Dawson were mentioned by every voter, while Little and Texas End Tom Stoffhandke, who led the voting for the second team, were omitted on just one ballot.

TCU had plenty of support despite its lack of first team members, four of the Horned Frogs making the second team and three the third.

While not a single sophomore crashed the top eleven, two TCU's Ray McKown and Arkansas Lamar McLean came close. McKown lacked only one point of displacing Riggs as the fourth man.

Rounding out the second team backfield with McKown and McLean were TCU's powerful fullbacks, Bobby Jack Floyd and Bobby Dillon, the one-eyed Texas defensive specialist.

At the other end with Stoffhandke was Harold Riley of Bayler.

Bayler's Ken Casner, who also lacked only one vote of making the first team, and Doug Conway of TCU won the second team tackle spots. Herb Zimmerman of TCU and James Davis of Texas were at the guard and Hugh Meyer of Texas A & M was at center.

Four SMU players, including brothers Bill and Hershie Forester, placed on the third team, which also had three TCU players, two from Arkansas and one each from Rice and A & M.
